CORVIN PALACE

The name APOLLO came from the very first movie theatre that stood at the square before the current classicist style Corvin Palace was built in the center of Budapest in 1926. In the 20th century it was functioning as a department store with all the elegance of the progressive Parisian and Londoner ancestors. The building was ahead of its time and from the very beginning, fine art played an important role in it. The fresh approach of APOLLO opening in Corvin Palace, is a tribute to this tradition and to the progressive philosophy of the building and the city.
